Course Description and Objectives

Nowadays on Saturday night we might go for dinner and a movie, or occasionally a play. We also binge-watch series, might have a comfort movie, or are into other types of social “performances.” The need for people to perform, see, and be seen, express views, and communicate with the world creatively has always been and still is pervasive. It is also important to be able to identify the social, cultural, and political parameters behind all such performances.

So, when and where did this start? Who were the first to write plays and put on performances? How were they executed without all the props and technological gadgets that we have today at our disposal? Were they meant just for pleasure or were they mirroring the contemporary society?

Last but not least, can we find any common ground between ancient performances and our performances? Can we inform our position as individuals and as members of a society by reading and understanding these works?

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the captivating genre of Ancient Greek Theater and the theatrical performances in the Ancient Greek world and also help them understand and familiarize themselves with Greek drama, culture, and other sociopolitical aspects of Ancient Greek society. At the same time, we will be broaching contemporary topics of interest that intersect with those of the ancient world.

Every week we will be examining fundamentals of Greek drama and theater and we will be discussing one play and the circumstances of its performance.

We will also be watching modern performances and reenact parts of these plays in class, so as to comprehend the technical aspects of Greek theater and better comprehend the way it would be perceived by the Greeks and perhaps even by us.

We will have quizzes and 2 exams on the discussed material, as well as 2 essays on a topic of your choice that will pertain to the issues discussed in class.

By the end of the class, the students will be proficient in the circumstances of performance in the Ancient Greek world, will be able to discuss a variety of plays and contextualize them culturally and politically, and will be comfortable to draw connecting lines between the past and the present to pinpoint the significance of learning from the past.

Course Requirements

- Daily preparation of the assigned material is required and necessary. This will also help you succeed in your quizzes and exams.
- CANVAS Discussions
- Weekly announced quizzes
- Two exams
- Two 3,000-word essays

Weekly Schedule

Every Monday we will be discussing the logistics of the theater and theatrical productions in Ancient Greece. We will be using as a guide the "Guide to Ancient Greek Drama". We will be devoting the other two periods on Thursday to the analysis of a play, as indicated (tentatively) in the schedule below. Policies

1. Your perfect attendance is expected. The university recognizes the right of the individual professor to make attendance mandatory. After due warning, professors can prohibit further attendance and subsequently assign a failing grade for excessive absences. Please, consult UF policies for details: <https://catalog.ufl.edu/UGRD/academic-regulations/attendance-policies/>

2. Students requesting classroom accommodation must first register with the Dean of Students Office. The Dean of Students Office will provide documentation to the student who must then provide this documentation to the Instructor when requesting accommodation. Please, consult the DRC center for further guidance and keep the lines of communication open with me, too: <https://disability.ufl.edu/get-started/>

3. The use of cellular devices during class is strictly prohibited.

4. Academic Honesty is expected at all times. We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honesty and integrity. On all work submitted for credit by students at the university, the following pledge is either required or implied: "On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment.

UF Online Evaluation Process

Students are expected to provide professional and respectful feedback on the quality of instruction in this course by completing course evaluations online via GatorEvals. Guidance on how to give feedback in a professional and respectful manner is available at <https://gatorevals.ua.ufl.edu/students/>. Students will be notified when the evaluation period opens, and can complete evaluations through the email they receive from GatorEvals, in their Canvas course menu under GatorEvals, or via <https://ufl.bluera.com/ufl/>. Summaries of course evaluation results are available to students at <https://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/public-results/>.
